THE WRITERS & THEIR SWEET INSPIRATIONS

Dublin has long been a crucible of creativity, birthing some of the most influential voices in world literature. Writers like James Joyce, W.B. Yeats, Oscar Wilde, and Samuel Beckett not only shaped language and form but also infused their work with the spirit of their city. Imagine joining them for tea – where ideas flow as freely as conversation, and each sweet tells a story.

"I have begun to think of life as a series of ripples widening out from an original center." {Seamus Heaney}
